ESCAPED PATIENT

Dr. Donohue of Grand View Sanatorium Conducted All Day Search on

Although an unceasing search has been kept up after the patient who escaped from the Grand View sanatorium on Washington street Tuesday morning about 11 o'clock, not a clue of any practical value has yet been found. All day Wednesday Dr. Donohue with half a dozen men scoured the woods and farms in the vicinity of Lebanon, Bozrah and Norwich Town in the hope of picking up some clue, but in vain. Several people in Norwich Town said they had seen a man answering the patient's description, but although these variety had seen a man answering the patient's description, but although these vague clues were closely followed up by Dr. Donohue and his assistants, the man was not found. In all the doctor and the men with him in his automobile covered approximately 100 miles on Wednesday, he said, and the search will be kept up today.

Trolleymen and others in Westerly, New London and other places have been asked to look out for any man answering the description of the escaped patient, and the local police have also been notified of his disappearance. Tuesday forenoon Dr. Donohue had made preparations to take four of his patients to the circus and just before made preparations to take four of his patients to the circus and just before noon went downtown to do some shopping. While at Young's store he received a telephone message to attend a man who had broken one of his legs. It was while the doctor was looking after this man that he received word from Mrs. Donohue that one of his patients at the sanatorium had escaped from the building. When the man got from the building. When the man got away he was followed closely down Yantic street by several of the men at the sanatorium but upon being cornered he struck one of the men in the stomach and knocked him down, instomach an juring him quite severely. It was a few minutes after this that he enter-ed the house occupied by Frank Lawed the house occupied by Frank Lawrence on Grosvenor place, which runs off Sachem street. Armed with an enormous club, which he could hardly wield, and which was nearly half a foot in thickness and some feet long, he entered the house, as the door was unlocked, probably with the intention of coneealing himself either in the cellar or attic, as he appeared unwilling to have his whereabouts known. Going un to the attic he found several chilto have his whereabouts known. Going up to the attic, he found several children playing, and threatened them if they made any noise. He was then scared out of the house and jumping over a fence he disappeared in the woods in the rear of the Lucas property. Since then he has not been seen. It seems probable that he will not be able to conceal himself from public view very long, as he will be driven out of his hiding place by hunger. The out of his hiding place by hunger. The man is six feet tall, weighs in the neighborhood of 160 pounds, has a large scar on the top of his head, full beard, and is of German nationality. Painless Death. On one occasion a well-known put lie man described the act of dying as "a great adventure that must be much more interesting than setting out for the north pole." While few will agree with him, it is a great thing to know that science has robbed death of its terrors, and has taught us t no matter how much a dying pers .. may appear to be suffering, he or she, immediately before death, can feel no pain whatever.
